A heavy blue veil covered her face. Just before ten o'clock Mr. Wait, the senior counsel for the defence, accompanied by Mr. Allen Tenney, came into the court From him it was learned that no visit had as yet been made by Professor Johnson to Yantic Cemetery for the purpose of exhuming the remaining portion of the body of Mrs. Riddle. Mr. Tenney imliately passed into the Judge's room and interviewed his client, who had been brought down from the jail nearly an hour before. In a few moments a number of ladies and gentleman, witnesses in the case, were shown into the Judge's room. At ten o'clock Prosecuting Attorney Ripley took his seat at the bar and shortly after Mr. Wait appeared, when the court was convened. Riddle occupied his old position in the rear of his counsel. His face betrayed no evidence of anxiety and had the usual preoccupied expression. A massive sparkling pin, headed brilliants, glittered from his dark satin necktie, and as he sat he twirled his Derby hat between

RIDDLE'S TEXT FOR A FUNERAL SERMON.

During the noon recess the Herald reporter had an interview with Rev. Hugh Montgomery, who preached the funeral sermon of the late Mrs. Riddle. Mr. Montgomery said that he was cailed upon by Mr. Riddle to preach the sermon of his wife, as none of the ministers of her denomination were in town. He requested me to speak from the text. 'Be sure your sins wif find you out.' The next day he came to me and wished me to select my own text, although that had been a favorite one with his wife. I afterward learned that his friends had advised him to take this course, as they thought capital would be made out of the first text on the street. I had no particular text in my sermon.

Riddle was taken to a downtown restaurant to dinner, and, it is said, still has a hearty appetite.

When the court reconvened at two o'clock Dr. Lowis S. Paddock was recalled to the witness stand and testified as to the general character of bismuth, and said that the effects of poisoning by impure bismuth were not similar to those of poisoning by arsenic; in some specimens of impure bismuth one-sixth of one per cent of arsenic was sometimes found; this figure is a maximum; the prescription of bismuth for Mrs. Riddle, reported in to-day's Herald, is harmless; about one-sixth of a grain of arsenic would be found in forty doses of the medicine.

Professor Johnson, who had completed his arrangements for taking away other portions of the remains of Mrs. Riddle, was in the court room and was called to the stand, but was excused so that he might catch the afternoon train.

Dr. W. G. C. Perkins testified as to the characteristics of bismuth. He was cross-examined by Mr. Wait, who read papers by a French physician in the New York College of Pharmacy. These stated that French bismuth was very impure; that it contained arsenic in such a large quantity that the bre

On being cross-examined by Mr. Greene the witness said Mrs. Riddle never spoke unkindly to her husband; she never said anything to the witness about him; Mrs. Branch refused to express any opinion on the utterance, "I am sick and tired of you." TESTIMONY OF MRS. RIDDLE'S MOTHERS.

Mrs. Prudence Mosely, an aged lady, in heavy mourning, was next placed on the witness stand. She was bowed and very infirm, and the bows of her gold-rimmed spectacles could with difficulty be seen above the railing. She said she now resided with her daughter, Mrs. Joel M. CAUGHT IN THE CYCLONE.

PERILOUS VOYAGE OF THE STEAMER FRANCE FROM LONDON-THE PIRST OFFICER'S STORY OF THE STORM.

The cyclone which developed itself off our coast on the morning of the 29th of October, as predicted in the HERALD of the 26th, is fast nearing the other side of the ocean, and the steamships that arrived yesterday had accounts of its terrific violence. Vessels coming up the coast from southern latitudes experienced the force of the storm with greater or less force. The lower edge of the storm passed in the neighborhood of Cape Hatteras. The officers of the France say they experienced less heavy gales than those of the Albana or Bristol, whose courses were nearer Sable Island, where the two branches or the cyclone met. Notwithstanding this, an old seaman, the chief officer of the France, says he never saw such a storm!

The National line steamer France came up abreast of her pier yesterday, sending her passengers off in a steamboat to the docks and anchored in the stream near the Jersey shore. To obtain further particulars of her stormy voyage a Henal Preporter went on board yesterday afternoon. The chief officer said of her stormy voyage a Herald reporter went on board yeaterday afternoon. The chief officer said the vessel left London on the afternoon of October 16 and anchored off the Nore. On the morning of the 17th the voyagers had fair weather, with strong breezes and cloudy, lowering weather. On the next four days there were fresh gales and head winds. This is unlike the experience of other steamships in this storm, and is believed to show that the disturbance is fast travelling toward Europe.

On the 22d the logbook of the France shows that there was a fresh breeze and an overcast sky, while on the 23d and 24th there was a moderate gale, with a head sea. The high wind then died away, and on the 25th and 25th there were brisk breezes. On the 25th and 25th the full force of the storm was felt, there being strong gales and heavy seas. During the whole of the 25th the wind ranged from a strong gale to a violent storm. The chief officer says that he believes that they struck the tail of a hurricane. The vessel had been sailing under a heavy press of canvass, but as the breeze freshened the topsails, jib and fore sails were housed. By cight o'clock in the morning they had heavy gales, hard squalls and high cross seas, and an hour later the wind was westerly. Toward moon the ship began to experience the force of the gale, and the sea broke over the decks force and at. The gale increased in force, and the sea became cross and highly dangerous. The ship labored and pitched heavy and heavy masses of water were thrown over her, fore and aft. As the afternoon wore of the gale became florced and was accompanied by squalls of rain. The ship was laboring and straining itself very much in the cross sea. Late in the evening the heavy sea scarled off her deck houses. The storm was violent, those gentlemen say, but the France, is a good sea boat and showed her best points.

Franca is a good sea boat and showed her best points.

THE STEERAGE DELUGED.

The water breaking over the decks got into the steerage, to the great inconvenience of the passengers. On the 30th the gale continued, making its greatest force during the morning of that day; heavy seas broke over the ship and stove in the starboard side of the saloon. At about four o'clock in the morning the gale moderated and time sea became less troubled, and four hours later the wind had decreased to a fresh gale. On the afternoon of the 31st the storm had passed the France. The officers do not believe that they reached the heart of the cyclone. They surmise that the storm from the Guif region met them, as they had passed the Banks the day before, and were some distance to the south of Sable Island. They are rather of the belief that the Guif region branch of the storm struck the France and passed on to the vessels whose experiences were detailed in yesterday's Herada. The France during the hurricane was in north latitude 42 deg. 5 min., and longitude 58 deg. 50 min., and her course stood well off the Banks. The chief officer, though he maintains that he was only in the southern portion, says he never saw anything like it in his life. The sea rolled mountains high, unlike its condition off the coast at Sable Island, where the water lay in confused masses.

The City of Alexandre, of the Alexandre line, from Yera Cruz, while standing off the coast of Georgia and North and South Carolina, on Saturday, also experienced heavy weather. They report strong northeast gales with rain, which secompanied them while passing from latitude 31 to 36 deg. north.

QUIET PASSAGE OF THE P. CALAND.

The steamahip P. Caland, of the Rotterdain line, while passing from latitude 31 to 36 deg. north.

QUIRT PASSAGE OF THE P. CALAND.

The steamship P. Caland, of the Rotterdam line, came up to her dock at the foot of Chambers street, Jersey City, late yesterday afternoon. Captain Deddes said he had not experienced heavy or strong winds till the vessel passed the Banks oft the 25th of October. Strong breezes and heavy northwesterly winds, with the barometer rising from 30.40 inches to 30.63, characterized the weather on the 26th. During the 30th the weather became rough. The P. Caland should have reached port on Saturday.

BOUND BY MASKED BURGLARS.

A JERSEY FARM HOUSE BANSACKED AND ROBBED-ESCAPE OF THE DESPERADORS. A daring burgiary was committed early yesterday morning by four masked men near the village of Unionville, Sussex county, N. J. Mr. Hough, an aged farmer, was awakened by a heavy pressure on volver in his hand, the muzzle of which he held only a few inches from Mr. Hough's forehead. Three companions of the desperado were ransacking bureaus and closets in the room, and the noise companions of the desparado were ransacking bureaus and closets in the room, and the noise aroused Mrs. Hough, who screamed for help. The farm hand, a servant and an elderiy lady were aroused by her shrieks and ran to the bedroom. The hired man carried his revolver and was the first to reach the door of the room. As he entered he levelied his weapon at the intruder who was keeping vigil at the bed. The thief coolly said, "Put down that pistol or I'll fire at the old man." At Mrs. Hough's solicitation the hired man surrendered his weapon to one of the gang, and he with the servant and the old lady were put under the care of another of the thieves. After making a thorough search of the premises the robbers left, taking with them $300 in money, a quantity of clothing, silverware and jewelry. Before leaving they bound all the immates with ropes and tied them so they could not aid each other. The hired man after an hour's work contrived to free himself and hurried to the stable to harness a horse and alarm the neighbors. The thieves had visited the stable and destroyed all the harness. A piece of rope was twisted into a bridle, and the neighbors were summoned. The robbers had had nearly two hours start, and, although the people scoured about the village, they falled to capture any of the miscreants. The features of the burglars were completely concealed by long masks. They are said to belong to Port Jervis.

HUNG HERSELF IN HER CELL.

Ann Atkinson, a woman thirty-nine years of age, Ann Alkinson, a woman thirty-nine years of age, yesterday afternoon hung horself while a prisoner in a cell at the Fourth street police station, in Williamsburg. She had been arrested for intoxication about an hour previous to the fatal act, during about an hour previous to the fatal act, during which period the station deerman had twice visited the cell corridor. The miserable woman had been very noisy and roundly denounced her custodian because deprived of her liberty. The cessation of the woman's ravings led the doorman to take another look at the prisoner, when he discovered her hauging to the cell door. She was cut down in the last throes of strangulation. Officers bore the insuinate body to the open air and promptly bathed the woman's head and face with water. Two physicians summoned in haste arrived too late to siferd relief. The victim, though married, did not live with her husband on secount of her dissipated habits. To accomplish her purpose she had torn a strip from her shawl, the ends of which she tied to the top bar of the cell door. Once before she had attempted suicide in the same place by swallowing a quantity of exalic acid procured before applying for lodging at the station house. Mr. Atkinson, upon receiving notification of his wife's death, promised to secure for her a decent burial.

CHICAGO'S DRY GOODS FAILURE.

Although business was generally suspended in the "dry goods district" yesterday many of the creditors of Stettauer Brothers & Co., of Chicago, were at their stores making up their accounts and discussing the failure. There was much speculation as to the cause of the firm's failure, but no report had been received from Chicago giving any reason for it. A despatch was received from Chicago giving the total liabilities at $1,714,600, of which there was unsecured $1,500,000, and secured $214,000. The nominal assets were about the same figures, no estimate of their real value being made.

Nevertheless both parties have been obliged to yield to the inexorable law of necessity and are forced to defer their disputes in the financial arena to another day. What to-morrow will bring forth we propose to treat of to-morrow afternoon, to-day being a dies non, and therefore sus ceptible of no treatment at all. RECEPTION OF THE DEAD GENERAL'S REMAINS

IN THIS CITY-PREPARATIONS FOR THE PU-NEEAL TO-DAY.

Hooker were placed in the Governor's Room, in the City Hall, shortly after one o'clock yesterday afternoon. The funeral services at Garden City, in the forenoon, were simple yet impressive. At nine A. M. sisting of a detail of three sergeants, an equal number of corporals and a dozen of enlisted men belonging to battery D. First United States artillery, left Hunter's Point for Garden City. The guard was under command of Lieu-tenant McNeill, who was assigned to the post by order of Major General Winfield S. Hancock, commanding the Department of the East. Arrived at the Garden City Hotel, where General Hooker spent his last hours, a simple service was intened over the corpse. Only a few persons were present and those outside of the military escort were of the more immediate relatives of General Hooker. Mr. J. H. Tredwell and Mr. George E. Hanford, the husarrangements, and Mrs. O. V. Brainard, of Water-town, New York, the sister of the deceased, was also in attendance. The remains were brought down to the reception parlor of the hotel, where the religious ceremonies took place. Rov. Dr. William H. Moore, of the Episcopai Church at Garden City, and Rev. Charles Miller, of the Methodist Church at Hempcharles Miller, of the Methodist Church at Hempstoad, conducted the services. No culogy was pronounced and no reference was made to the brilliant military record of the General. On the conclusion of the services the body was brought, still under escort, to Hunter's Point on the way to this city. At that place the soldiers were met by Major J. P. Sanger, or the First United States artillery, commanding Fort Columbus, who ordered, by command of General Hancock, the military bearing arms to return to Governor's Island. It was absolutely necessary that this should be done, as the law very stringently provides against the presence of military in any place in which an election is being hold. A smail guard was allowed to accompany the remains to the City Hall, at which place the body arrived in the afternoon. The body, in the presence of a number of army officers, was conveyed to a catafalque in the Governor's Room, upon which it was placed. It was carried to the room by eight able-bodied members of the First artillery and was draped in the Stars and Stripes. Upon the casket rested the cocked hat and plume of a major general and the sword and belt that had been worn by General Hooker at the engagement at Lockout Mountain. The room was most tastefully and elegantly draped, under the supervision of John Sloper, the keeper of the City Hall, and around the room were placed well-worn battle flags that had been in many a fight. The dead General retained his normal appearance to a remarkable degree. His shapely head, surmounted by a mass of hair streaked with gray, rested on a fluted satin pillow. The features were that calm yet determined expression that is so well known to those with whom the General came in contact. Among the military gentlemen who were at the City Hall when the body arrived may be mentioned General J. Hobart Ward, Colonel Mix, Majors Ridgway, Duflow and Purdy, Lieutenants McNeill and Moran and Captains Kay and Garnett.

The honors to be paid to General Hooker's remains to-day include a grand military dis stead, conducted the services. No eulogy was pro-nounced and no reference was made to the brilliant ing command of General Sherman, have been given:—
